CORE TO COGNITIVE

How Everyday Nutrition Shapes Movement and Memory

When we think about health, we often view the body and the brain independently. In reality, they are deeply connected. The strength of our core muscles, joints, and posture directly affects how well we move and how well we think. Everyday nutrition and simple lifestyle habits play an important role in supporting both movement and memory.

PROTEIN

Getting enough protein helps maintain brain health, muscle tone and strength, especially as we age. Ideally 25-30 grams of protein per meal, to effectively stimulate muscle synthesis.

Animal-based proteins (meat, fish, eggs, dairy) are generally the most efficient sources because they contain all nine essential amino acids in adequate amounts and are readily digested.

PLANT-BASED PROTEIN

Soy products (tofu, tempeh, edamame), quinoa other plant proteins (legumes, nuts, seeds, grains) can be combined for consumption throughout the day to form a complete amino acid profile.

Key vitamins and nutrients that support both brain function and physical movement.

- Vitamin B12: Meat, fish, dairy, eggs
- Folate (B9): Leafy greens, legumes, fortified grains

IRON

Iron is a core component of hemoglobin in red blood cells, playing a critical role in delivering oxygen to muscles for energy and to the brain for proper function.

- Iron : red meat, oysters and spinach.

STRONG BONES, SHARP MIND: STAY ACTIVE AND ALERT AT EVERY AGE

WHY STRONG BONES MATTER?

Bones support your body and protect your organs. As we age, bones may become thinner and weaker. This increases the risk of falls and fractures, especially around the hip, wrist, and spine.

To keep bones strong, focus on:

✓ Calcium-rich foods

Milk, yogurt, cheese, tofu, and green leafy vegetables.

✓ Vitamin D

Sunlight helps your body absorb calcium. Try to get 10-20 minutes of morning sun several times a week.

✓ Regular exercise

Weight-bearing activities like walking, climbing stairs, dancing, and light jogging help maintain bone strength.

WHY BRAIN HEALTH IS IMPORTANT?

A healthy brain helps us remember, focus, and make good decisions. Some memory lapse may happen as we age, but we can slow down mental decline by staying active and engaged.

Ways to keep your mind sharp:

✓ Use your brain daily

Read books, play puzzles, learn new skills, or try a new hobby.

✓ Stay socially connected

Chatting with friends, joining social activities, or volunteering keeps your brain stimulated.

✓ Sleep well

Aim for 7-8 hours of sleep each night to allow your brain to rest and recharge.

WHY BONE AND BRAIN HEALTH ARE LINKED?

Growing evidence suggests a bidirectional relationship between skeletal integrity and cognitive performance. Reduced bone mineral density (BMD), as seen in Osteoporosis, is associated with increased risk of falls, and subsequent disability. Post-fracture immobility can accelerate physical decline, reduce social engagement, and contribute to cognitive deterioration.

Conversely, cognitive impairment may lead to poor medication adherence, inadequate nutrition, and increased fall risk. Observational studies have demonstrated that individuals with lower BMD may also have a higher likelihood of cognitive decline.

SMALL STEPS. BIG RESULTS

You don't need drastic changes. Simple daily habits: eating well, staying active, sleeping enough, and keeping yourself socially connected can help protect both your bones and brain.

It's never too early or too late to start.
Stay active. Stay alert. Stay strong at every age.
