NOURISHING MOM, NUTURING BABY : ESSENTIAL NUTRITION TIPS

Wan Nursyaqhirah
Binti Wan Zuhaimi
Nutritionist at Mega Kulim Pharmacy

DO YOU KNOW ?

Lactating mothers in Malaysia require about 2500-2800 calories per day, especially in the first six months after birth. In the early months of breastfeeding, your baby depends entirely on you for essential nutrients that support healthy growth and development. This is especially important to maintain a balanced and nutritious diet even after childbirth.

WHAT SHOULD BREASTFEEDING MOTHERS EAT?

1. ENERGY AND PROTEIN-RICH FOODS

- First 6 months: Mothers need an extra 500 kcal/day and 19g of protein/day
- Second 6 months: An additional 13g of protein/day is required (no extra calories needed) maintain a youthful appearance.

2. BALANCED MEALS USING THE MALAYSIAN HEALTHY PLATE

- Half plate: Non-starchy vegetables and fruits
- Quarter plate: Lean protein (fish, poultry, eggs, legumes, dairy)
- Quarter plate: Carbohydrates (preferably whole grains like brown rice, oats, or tubers like sweet potatoes)

3. HIGH-QUALITY PROTEIN

Protein intake is crucial to support milk production, energy level and recovery postpartum. Both protein sources can benefit breastfeeding mothers. For normal breastfeeding mothers, they can consume high source protein foods such as eggs, lean chicken breast, beef, salmon, Greek yogurt while for vegetarian breastfeed mothers they can use plant based protein such as tofu, tempeh, lentils and chickpeas. They can also use supplements such as protein powders as a convenient option

4. HEALTHY FATS

Healthy fats, especially Omega-3 and Omega-6, play a key role in your baby's brain and nervous system development. You can get Omega-3 from fish like siakap, cencaru, and kembung, as well as from nuts and seeds. Omega-6 is found in oils like corn, soybean, and sunflower oil. Avoid saturated fats such as butter, fatty meats, full cream milk, and coconut milk to support better health for both mom and baby.

5. MILK AND DAIRY PRODUCTS

During pregnancy, the calcium actively will be transported from mother to fetus via placenta. Thus lead to inadequate calcium from mothers. Therefore, consumption of milk and dairy products during breastfeeding can help to replenish the calcium in the mother. In addition, milk is also a source of protein that helps to increase milk production.

6. MICRONUTRIENTS

Micronutrients are important for the growth of the breastfed baby for both immediate and long term. Therefore, food fortification or diversified diet help to prevent micronutrient deficiency in lactating mothers. Lactating mothers need additional intake of iron, folic acid, iodine, cobalamine (vitamin B12), vitamin C, Vitamin A and other nutrients. As such, supplements can be suggested in mothers to increase nutritional demands during this period.

CONCLUSION

Eating nutrient-dense foods and staying hydrated is not just about taking care of the mother. It is also a long-term investment in the baby's health. A balanced, varied diet supports milk production, promotes healthy growth, and sets the foundation for a strong, thriving child. For breastfeeding mothers, every bite truly matters.

THE ULTIMATE CHECKLIST: MUST-HAVE PRODUCTS FOR NEW MOMS AND BABIES

Nur Farahin Azwa Binti Rosli
Pharmacist at Mega Kulim Pharmacy

Having a checklist of essential products is crucial for new moms and their babies. It ensures everything needed for the baby's care and comfort is ready ahead of time, reducing stress and confusion. A checklist also helps with financial planning, prioritizing important items, and avoiding unnecessary purchases. Most importantly, it gives peace of mind, knowing both mom and baby are well-prepared.
