EMPOWER YOURSELF: 10 ESSENTIAL BREAST CANCER PREVENTION TIPS EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW

Breast cancer is a concern for many women, but taking proactive steps can significantly reduce your risk. Here are 10 essential tips to help you empower yourself and support your overall well being:

A diet rich in fruits, vegetables, and whole grains. Reducing intake of processed foods and saturated fats can contribute to overall health and may lower the risk of breast cancer.

Drinking alcohol is linked to a higher risk of breast cancer. Try to keep your alcohol consumption to no more than one drink per day.

Regular exercise is good for your overall health and can help reduce your risk of breast cancer. Aim for at least 30 minutes of moderate exercise, like brisk walking, on most days of the week

Being overweight, especially after menopause, can increase your risk of breast cancer. Try to maintain a healthy weight by eating a balanced diet and staying active.

Smoking is harmful to your health and can increase the risk of various cancers, including breast cancer. If you smoke, seek help from healthcare professionals to quit.

Try to limit unnecessary exposure to radiation from medical tests and procedures. If you need medical imaging, talk to your doctor about any potential risks.

Mother who breastfeed have a lower risk of breast cancer. The longer the duration of breastfeeding, the more the risk is reduced.

If breast cancer runs in your family, you might want to consider genetic testing to see if you have a higher risk. This can help you and your doctor decide on the best preventive measures.

Get to know how your breasts normally look and feel. Regularly check for any changes, such as lumps or unusual pain, and report any concerns to your doctor right away. Early detection can be crucial to help reduce mortality risk.

Mammograms can help detect breast cancer early when it's most treatable. Most health experts recommend starting yearly mammograms at age 50, or earlier if you have a family history of breast cancer.

NOURISHING YOUR MIND: THE ROLE OF DIET IN MENTAL WELLBEING

Article written by:
Anis Balqis binti Asiati Raili
Dietitian at Mega Kulim Pharmacy

We usually emphasize that eating well helps us feel and look our best physically. We do not always hear that eating a healthy diet has a big impact on our mental health as well. A healthy and well-balanced diet can help us think clearly and feel more alert. Additionally, it can also enhance concentration and lengthen our attention span. On the other hand, a poor diet can cause lethargy, bad decision making and can slow down reaction time.

When we are stressed or depressed, we often reach for processed foods or ready-to-eat foods. During hectic or difficult periods, a cup of coffee or sugary drinks become our best friend, fruits and vegetables are replaced with high calorie and high fat foods. When we are feeling down, ice creams, chocolates and pastries become our perfect dinner, or we might skip dinner altogether.

We tend to either eat too much or too little when we are depressed or under stress. Eating too much and we find ourselves dealing with sluggishness and weight gain. Eating too little and we find ourselves being tired, lazy and wanting to stay in bed all day. In either case, poor diet during stress and depression periods only makes matters worse. This cycle is a vicious one, but it can be overcome.

FOODS TO INCORPORATE INTO A HEALTHY MENTAL DIET:

Complex carbohydrates

Brown rice, starchy vegetables, quinoa, millet etc. - give us energy and keep us feel full for a longer period than simple carbohydrates found in sugar and candy.

High protein diet

Legumes, nuts, seeds, milk, fish, egg, cheese, soy products – diets high in protein can support mental health and it helps to regulate our thoughts and feelings.

Healthy fat

Nuts, seeds, avocados, olive oil, coconut oil, oily fish such as sardines, mackerels and salmon – healthy fats consist of omega-3 and omega-6 are crucial for the proper function of our brain, nervous system and hormone productions and regulations.

Food for gut health

When we are stressed, it can lead to problems with digestion such as feeling bloated or constipated or may not feel as hungry as usual. You can try eating more foods that support healthy digestion such as fruits, vegetables, wholegrains, beans, lentils as well as probiotics such as yoghurt, tempeh and kimchi.

Avoid alcohol

Drinking too much alcohol can disrupt chemicals in the brain that are important for good mental health. Alcohol dependency during stressed and depression can cause addiction.

Avoid caffeine

Caffeine makes you feel more anxious and depressed. It disturbs our sleep and give withdrawal symptoms such as irritable if we suddenly stop having it.
